ARCHBISHOP ASSERTS RIGHTS OF CATHOLICS

Baltimore Prelate Proposes That Organization Be Improved, in Holy Name Address.

Improvement of organization among Catholics for the upholding of their rights as American citizens was urged by Archbishop Michael J. Curley of Baltimore last night before more than 2,000 members of the Holy Name Society of Washington in the Holy Comforts Parish Hall.

He spoke plainly of his disbelief in letting "sleeping dogs lie." "If you let men walk on you and they're right, if we always lie low and wait for the storm to pass it will never pass."

He spoke of conditions in Florida and other southern states, which, he declared, had seen an intensified anti-Catholic campaign growing during the past seven years. He said that he would mention no names in reference to those attacking the church, but added: "You know who they are as well as I do."

The need for providing educational facilities for children of persons unable to afford pay for higher educational courses was emphasized during his talk.

He declared that children were not being given sufficient education and urged that the child be given a chance to go higher than the parents. He urged especially the completion of a high school course for children.

Archbishop Curley also gave a brief resume of the activities of the Holy Name Society and its history from the time of its institution to the present, and concluded his address with a eulogy of the late Pope Benedict, whom he termed "the Pope of peace and the lover of mankind."

Representative W. Bourke Cockran of New York, also delivered an address, in which he urged members of the Holy Name Society to lead an upright Catholic life and let the Holy Name Society spread.

Patrick J. Halligan, archdiocesan president of the Holy Name Society, presided at a short business meeting preceding the addresses, and introduced Rev. P. C. Gavan, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, who made the speech presenting Archbishop Curley.

PACKERS ARE ACCUSED.

Complaint Filed Against Armour & Co. and Fowler Packing Co.

Violation of the packers and stockyards act of 1921 by Armour & Co. and the Fowler Packing Company is charged in a complaint filed with Secretary Wallace of the Agriculture Department. The complaint, which was said to be the first formally filed under the new packers control legislation, charges that the defendants' prices include "prejudicially fixed" and are "tending toward an absolute monopoly in the purchase and slaughter of hogs."

The complaint sets forth that the two packing companies receive, buy, hold, hold, weigh and handle hogs at the Mistletoe stockyard in Wyandotte county, Kan., in a manner which violates the control legislation. It is alleged that the defendants are "soliciting and inducing" and "persuading" shippers to consign their hogs to the Fowler Packing Company. On arrival, the complainants declare, the "hogs are unloaded, weighed empty, watered, but not fed, and then reweighed."

The companies maintain a staff of buyers, it is charged, "whose duty it is to watch all sales of hogs on the open competitive market at Mistletoe stockyard to fix the prices to be paid for hogs consigned to that yard," where "shippers are without representation," the defendants buy, are selling "in the dual capacity of buyer and seller."

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle. The best thing to use is Mulsified coconut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. About a teaspoonful of Mulsified is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh-looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

Relieves Rheumatism

Musterole loosens up stiff joints and drives out pain. A clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard, it usually brings relief as soon as you start to rub it on.

It does all the good work of the old-fashioned mustard plaster, without the blister. Doctors and nurses often recommend its use.

Get Musterole today at your drug store. 35c and 65c in jars and tubes; hospital size, $3.00.

Every Issue of The Star Is a "Ten Strike"

First of All— Dependable

You can bank upon the authenticity of what you read day after day in The Star. Its news-gathering organization is trained to a degree of conservatism capable of differentiating between FACTS and sensational rumors.

The world is the field covered, and every minute of the twenty-four hours of the day the argus eyes of this army of correspondents are keenly focused upon what is happening—seeing everything; exaggerating nothing.

The mission of The Star is to supply to the community of Washington a history of current events, so complete that it keeps one fully informed. To read The Star—Daily and Sunday—is to know all about everything that's transpiring at home and abroad.

But it is printed with a strict censorship that keeps every line clean and wholesome—fit for the reading of every member of the family—and welcomed into every home because it is a safe and sane newspaper.

The Sunday Star Is a Symposium of Information and Entertainment

The Editorial Section

Eagerly looked for Sunday for its special articles on the vital topics of the times—from the pens of those most competent to discuss them.

Next Sunday's menu will include:

Strengthening Morale of Labor, by Will P. Kennedy—the big part Secretary Davis and the Department of Labor are playing in the administration's program to make and keep America prosperous.

Fate of Irish Patriots, by Rev. Dr. Peter Guilday, professor of history at the Catholic University of America—an historical reflection inspired by the fall of Eamon De Valera.

The Chile-Peru Controversy, by Ben McKelway—an explanation of the Tarca-Arica dispute, which is being brought to Washington for settlement, upon invitation of President Harding.

And in addition:

Former Vice President Marshall, N. O. Messenger, Oliver Owen Kuhn, Henry W. Bunn, Edward N. Dingley, G. Gould Lincoln and other writers familiar to Star readers will have articles of timely interest.

Reflecting European Thought

Especially at this stage of the international tangle it is interesting to read the views of our European contemporaries. These are graphically set forth by The Star's trio of special correspondents located at three strategic points—

George S. Barnes—who sits in the British Parliament and is a participant in, as well as an interested observer of, his nation's policies—writes of the English mind.

Andre Tardieu—a distinguished Frenchman who has lived among us as High Commissioner for his government, and who is close in her counsels, is in wonderful position to accurately reflect public opinion over there—which he is doing in his weekly letter in The Sunday Star.

Maximilian Harden, the German publicist, is a plain and forceful writer, with clear vision of conditions on both sides of the ocean—and is interpreting for Star readers the political and economic mind of his countrymen.

Pictured News

The Rotogravure Section brings to you in picture events and their participants while they are still news. Nothing so graphically illustrates and so realistically portrays as does Rotogravure. It is the last word in picture printing.

The Sunday Magazine

An appealing popular feature of The Sunday Star, with its always fresh and enjoyable miscellany. You'll pronounce next Sunday's a banner number.

"Uncle Sam Goes Gunning For Trade With a Motion Picture Camera"

A romance of American business. How tin cans of film, showing our industries, are going into the far corners of the earth.

"Old Iron"

A Story by Stacy Aumonier.

This new writer to The Sunday Magazine has produced a tale like you have never read before. You will look for another story by Stacy Aumonier.

"What About Your Coffee?"

Do you know where it comes from? The story of the production and marketing reads like fiction—but it is fact.

"Missing Out On Bumbo"

The title of this story tells you who wrote it. Sewell Ford writes very few "duds," and this story goes off with a loud report.

"She Climbs to Fame on a String of Pearls"

The fact story of a "Scottish Jenny Lind," who paid for her musical training with a string of pearls. The last pearl is secure, and the singer has found a prominent place.

"The Men of Zanzibar"

One of the last and best stories of Richard Harding Davis. The famous author, traveler and war correspondent reached the fiction heights with this tale. You cannot afford to miss it.

"Lardner's 1922 Rules For Warfare."

"Rambler Continues Story of Bladenburg."

"Sun, Sand and Soap," by H. Bedford Jones.

"Great Links in National Park Chain."

There's lots to be told of Society's doings. The season is at its height right now. It's all in Sunday's Star.

Anne Rittenhouse has dropped the ladies of Washington a "special delivery" letter on Spring fashion, written from Paris. You will read it Sunday.

The "fans" will have lots to read about in the Sporting Section of The Sunday Star. They are "polishing up the diamond" now for a lively season.

The Fraternal Societies and Clubs are doing things these days—which make an interesting chapter in The Sunday Star.

The Screen and the Stage—what's coming to Washington theaters and gossip about the leading lights in both professions.

Mr. Business Man, the Financial News in Sunday's Star will interest you, showing as it will the trend of the market and the tendency of securities.

Muse with the Muses—read of what's being done in Art, Music, Literature—locally and elsewhere.

The Merchants' Messages were never more interesting than they'll be in Sunday's Star. You'll find all the store news there.

There'll be a scramble for the Comic Section Sunday. All our old friends are mixed up in ludicrous situations. Four colored pages of hearty laughs.

The Automobile pages will be full of practical "dos and don'ts" that will help the motorist to care for and operate his car more satisfactorily and safely.
